“ What I remember most about Uncle Clarence is that he enjoyed farming. It wasn't just a job. Once we were baling hay on Allen's farm, known as the Sixty, across from Ray Schultz's house. There were several small hills on the back of the field, about where Henry Schultz's house is now. Clarence was driving the Oliver and I was stacking bales on the wagon. When the tractor started climbing a hill, Clarence looked back and saw that the wagon was still coming down the last hill. He grinned and waved his arms like we were on a roller coaster. I always remembered that.

“ Uncle Clarence lived a full life, and was most proud of his family. Farming was in his blood, sharing that passion with his father and brothers. But the first thing I think of when I remember Uncle Clarence is his laughter and kindness. You couldn't visit with him without feeling uplifted. He will be greatly missed. Prayers to all of his family.
