“ My favorite memory of Kenny would have to be the first time we met in the fourth grade. I had just moved to the mountain. We were on the way to the lunch room. I had some potato chips I was eating and offered Kenny some. We finished the chips before we got to the lunch room. He asked me if I liked muscadines. I had never heard of them before but said yes anyway. He brought some from home the next day. Turned out that I really liked them. Kenny said that they grew them around his house. We became good friends that day. Kenny was the first friend that I made after moving there. We grew up together through good and bad times. We stayed close till we moved away in our late teen years. There are many, many memories I still think about often and smile about to this day. RIP my friend, till we meet again on the other side, Mike Smith.
